INCREASING POULTRY

WASHINGTON, D. C .- The statement made at the recent agricultural conference at St. Louis that the poultry products of the United States could be doubled within a year means year. This inicudes both meat for the table and eggs. Very few farmers practice a systematic plan of disposing of their fowls after they have ceased to be productive, altho it is well known that fowls of the heavier breeds, such as the Plymouth Rocks, cease to produce a profitable number of eggs at the end of their 2nd laying year, and that this holds true of the dispose of all females when their best laying days were over, a large quantity of poultry meat would be placed on the market. All poorly developed chickens should likewise be culled out and used as meat. This way of disposing of unprofitable fowls would al-low the farmer to feed his grain to younger and more productive fowls. Caponizing the cockerels that are not intended for breeding purposes will not only increase their size, but will place a more desirable poultry meat on the market. Another practice that should be adopted more widely is that of fattening all chickens that are to
